

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction: What Were They Thinking?	1
Thinking Close-In	4
Why Do I Write?	4
More Personally	5
Hannah Arendt, “The Banality of Evil”	8
The Evil of Banality	9
Meaningful Contexts, Larger Systems	10
Overview	12
Secular Moral Thinking	13
PART I: THINKING THE UNTHINKABLE	15
1 Truth and Fiction: Camus’ The Plague	17
Philosopher, Resistance Fighter	18
An Ordinary Town	18
On Being Unprepared	20
Extraordinary	21
Attending to the Smallest Things	22
2 Thinking about Not-Thinking	25
Thinking, Morality	27
Crucial Contexts, Changing Times	29
Stopping Minds	30
Two-Faced Evil	31
Adolf Eichmann, Saddam Hussein	33
Out of Touch	35

	Self-Centered	36
	A Continuum of Attentiveness	37
3	Changing Minds	41
	Transitioning	42
	Reversing	45
	The Heart of the Matter	47
	Thought Experiments	48
4	Escaping Explanations, Excuses	51
	Catch-All Phrases	52
	No General Rules	59
	As Spiders Spin Webs: Abstractions	60
	Reconfiguring Meanings	61
5	Meaning, Truth, Rationality, Knowledge, Thinking	63
	Clarifying Thinking	65
	A Note of Caution	67
	Beyond Bad: Moral Horror	67
	Rational, Irrational, Antirational	69
	Incomprehensibility and the Unique	74
	Those Who Know	75
	Politics of Fear, Terror	76
	Intentional	78
	Breeding Grounds	79
	“Don’t Look Back”	80
	Stop, and Think	81
6	Romanticizing Evil	83
	“The Nonwicked Everybody”	85
7	Intensive Evil, Extensive Evil	87
	Focus on Intensive Evil	91
	“Evil”? or “Bad,” “Sick,” “Abnormal”	93
	Crossing from “Wrong,” to “Taboo,” to “Possessed”	94
	Not Just Crimes	95
	Focus on Extensive Evil	96
	Reliable Workers	97
	Objections	97
	“A Murderous Rage”	100
	Revealing Resistance	101
	It Really Is That Bad—and That Common, and Easy	102
	Not “Bad Apples”; Perhaps Golden Ones	103
	Speaking Truth to Ourselves	106

8	The Ordinary for Good and Ill	109
	Habituation	110
	Common Sense	111
	Processing Reality	112
	More Morality?	113
	Education	113
	Moving on the Continuum of Attentiveness	114
PART II: GOODNESS: WHAT IS TO BE DONE?		117
9	Philip Hallie: It Takes a Village	119
	Moral Thinking	120
	Conventional Thoughtlessness: The Opposite of Extensive Good	122
	“Stupid,” “Dull,”—and Not	123
10	Preparing for Extensive Goodness	125
	Observations from Close-In	127
11	Looking for Good Beyond The Village	137
	Selfish Integrity: Moral Introverts and Extroverts	138
	Complex Relations between Intensive and Extensive Good	139
	Timing and Judgment	142
	Modestly Conserving Values	143
	Good Learning	147
	Acting Well	148
12	The Banality of Goodness?	151
	Good Stories May Mislead	152
	Is “Great” to “Good” as “Evil” Is to “Bad”?	153
	Purposes, Problems of Religion	155
	Overreaching Good	156
	Supererogation Again	157
	Making a Real Difference	159
	Not to Know but to Do the Good	160
PART III: FERTILE GROUNDS FOR EXTENSIVE EVIL		163
13	Seeding Prepared Ground	165
	Exploring Indifference	166
	“Groupthink”	168
	Careerism	169
	Catchy Superficiality	171
	“A Done Deal”	172
	Occupied Minds, On Track	173

Reframings: “Misfortune,” “Fate,” “The Workings of History”	174
Changing Memories, and Loyalties	176
Insults, Peer Pressure, Sex/Gender Identities	178
Cleanliness, Purity	178
“Edifying Phrases”	179
Blurred Generalizations, Sliding Over Differences, Contradictions	180
14 Large-Scale Enclosures: Meaning Systems	183
Scientizing	183
Closed Systems, Alternative Realities	185
“Realism” versus Responsiveness	188
Nationalisms, Racialisms: Abstract Identities Writ in Blood	189
Always Again: Sex, Sexuality, Gender	192
15 Physical Enclosures of Bodies, Minds	195
Institutionalizing Corrupting Relations	195
“Base Instincts” Conventionalized	196
Chameleons: In and Out, Off and On Duty	197
Status	198
Boredom	199
Working Free	200
Being Conscientious	201
Transporting Categories: Medicalizing	202
Escapism, Vacations, R and R	203
16 Laying Out the Strands	207
The Trifecta: Greed, Careerism, Status	209
Stilling Consciousness from Which Conscience Can Arise	211
Jobholders: Thinking What We Are Doing	212
Afterword: Teaching Thinking	215
What May We Hope?	215
What Ought We to Do?	216
Notes	219
Bibliography: Sources and Resources	229
Index	235
Author Biography	243