

Ecogothic in Nineteenth-Century American Literature

Edited by Dawn Keetley and
Matthew Wynn Sivils

Contents

Introduction: Approaches to the Ecogothic	1
DAWN KEETLEY AND MATTHEW WYNN SIVILS
1 “Perverse Nature”: Anxieties of Animality and Environment in Charles Brockden Brown’s Edgar Huntly	21
TOM J. HILLARD
2 “A Heap of Ruins”: The Horrors of Deforestation in Leonora Sansay’s Secret History	37
LISA M. VETERE
3 “The Earth Was Groaning and Shaking”: Landscapes of Slavery in The History of Mary Prince	51
AMANDA STUCKEY
4 “Give me my skin”: William J. Snelling’s “A Night in the Woods” (1836) and the Gothic Accusation Against Buffalo Extinction	65
JIMMY L. BRYAN JR.
5 Failures to Signify: Poe’s Uncanny Animal Others	83
KATE HUBER
6 Gothic Materialisms: Experimenting with Fire and Water in Edgar Allan Poe’s Tales of (Im)mortality	96
LIZ HUTTER
7 “The Birth-Mark,” “Rappaccini’s Daughter,” and the Ecogothic	114
LESLEY GINSBERG

vi Contents

- 8 Ghoulish Hinterlands: Eco gothic Confrontations in American Slave Narratives 134
JERICHO WILLIAMS
- 9 Bleeding Feet and Failing Knees: The Eco gothic in Uncle Tom's Cabin and *Chasing Ice 147
CARI M. CARPENTER
- 10 Vegetal Haunting: The Gothic Plant in Nineteenth-Century American Fiction 161
MATTHEW WYNN SIVILS
- 11 Eco gothic Extinction Fiction: The Extermination of the Alaskan Mammoth 175
JENNIFER SCHELL
- 12 Hyperobjects and the End of the World: Elemental Antagonists of American Naturalism 191
JEFFREY ANDREW WEINSTOCK
- 13 "Two Distinct Worlds"? Maintaining and Transgressing the Boundaries of the HumAnimal in Thomas Pynchon's *Mason & Dixon 206
MICHAEL FUCHS
- Notes on Contributors* 221
Index 225