

Contents

Preface		vii
General editor's preface		ix
Abbreviations		xi
Introduction		1
Chapter 1	Hume's philosophy of scepticism	10
	§1: Justification	11
	§2: Truth	20
	§3: Belief	27
	§4: Conclusion	30
Chapter 2	Scepticism with regard to the senses	38
	§5: The senses	40
	§6: Reason	48
	(a) Can reason be the source of our belief in body?	49
	(b) The premises of Hume's argument for scepticism	50
	(c) How indirect realism is dependent on the natural belief	55
	§7: Imagination	59
	(a) The problem	59
	(b) The natural propensity to believe in a continuous unperceived existence	64
	(c) The causes which induce us to believe in the existence of body	68
	(d) How we believe in the appearance and non-appearance of a single object	71
	§8: Conclusion	74

vi Contents

Chapter 3	Knowledge and objective scepticism	85
	§9: Quantity	91
	§10: Space and matter	100
	§11: Matter and sensible qualities	107
	§12: Conclusion	112
Chapter 4	Causal scepticism and necessary natural powers	123
	§13: The senses and causal scepticism	128
	§14: Reason	135
	(a) Perceptual distinctions	135
	(b) Objective necessary connection	147
	§15: Natural judgement of objective connection	150
	(a) The principles of our natural judgement	151
	(b) The identity of cause and effect	155
	§16: Hume's rejection of Newtonian 'active powers'	161
	(a) Hume's dispute with John Stewart	162
	(b) Do we know an active cause through human volition?	164
	(c) The cause of order	167
	(d) Humean mechanism	171
	§17: Conclusion	174
Chapter 5	Hume's science of human nature	187
	§18: Experimental method	192
	(a) Pronouncements	192
	(b) Practice	200
	§19: Neurological mechanisms: impressions, beliefs, and ideas.	209
	(a) Impressions	211
	(b) Beliefs	214
	(c) Ideas	219
	§20: Natural judgements	221
	(a) The teachings of human nature: Descartes' theory	222
	(b) Hume's adoption of Malebranche's theory of natural judgement	224
	(c) Hume's revisionary conception of human nature as teacher	226
	§21: Conclusion	230
	List of works cited	247
	Index	257