

The Red Years

Theory, Politics, and Aesthetics in the Japanese '68

Edited by Gavin Walker

VERSO

London • New York

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Note on the Text	xi
1 Revolution and Retrospection Gavin Walker	1
2 On the Japanese '68 Hiroshi Nagasaki	12
3 The Ethics of the Agitator: On Hiroshi Nagasaki's The Phenomenology of Politics Yoshihiko Ichida	38
4 The Perception of Violence, the Violence of Perception, and the Origins of Japan's 1968 William Marotti	57
5 '68 and the Japanese Women's Liberation Movement Setsu Shigematsu	77
6 1968 and the Postwar Regime of Emperor-System Democracy Hidemi Suga	98
7 The Japanese Communist Party since 1968: Between Revolution and Reform Yoshiyuki Koizumi	120

8	Human Liberation or “Male Romance”? The Gendered Everyday of the Student New Left Chelsea Szendi Schieder	143
9	The Undercurrent of Art and Politics in the 1960s: On Gendai Shichōsha Yoshiko Shimada	160
10	1972: The Structure on the Streets Yutaka Nagahara	181
11	Night and Fog in Japan: Toward Another Critique of Violence Alberto Toscano	212
12	The Post-’68 Conjuncture Gavin Walker	229
	Notes on contributors	237
	Bibliography	241
	Index	251