

Contents

Acknowledgements	xiii
1 Introduction	1
1.1 About you . . .	2
1.2 What is stylistics?	3
1.3 Some debates about the methods and purpose of stylistics	6
1.4 The background to the study of language and literature	9
1.5 The purpose of this book	10
1.6 The structure of this book	11
2 Sound and metre in poetry	15
2.1 Introduction	16
2.2 Sound patterning	17
2.2.1 Examples of sound patterning	17
2.2.2 Sounds versus letters	19
2.2.3 Syllable structure and sound patterning	25
2.2.4 Different forms of sound patterning	30
2.3 Stress and metrical patterning	32
2.3.1 Word stress	32
2.3.2 Stress in longer units	34
2.3.3 Analysing metre	35
2.3.4 Different types of feet	36

CONTENTS

2.3.5	Different types of metre	37
2.4	Conventional forms of metre and sound	38
2.5	The poetic functions of sound and metre	43
2.6	Analysis of poetry: checklist	45
	Suggestions for further reading	47
3	Grammar and literary style	49
3.1	Introduction	50
3.2	What is grammar?	52
3.3	Attitudes to grammar: prescription and description	52
3.4	Two levels of grammar: morphology and syntax	54
3.5	Word classes	58
3.5.1	Identifying word classes	58
3.5.2	Open and closed class words	62
3.6	Describing noun and verb phrases	64
3.6.1	The noun phrase	64
3.6.2	The verb phrase	65
3.6.3	Non-finite verb phrases	67
3.7	Describing sentences	70
3.7.1	Simple and complex sentences	71
3.8	Foregrounding and grammatical form	75
3.9	Analysis of grammar: checklist	79
	Suggestions for further reading	80
4	Meaning	81
4.1	Introduction	82
4.2	Semantics	82
4.2.1	Gaps and overlaps	83
4.2.2	Opposites	85
4.2.3	Hyponyms and superordinates	86
4.3	Context	88
4.3.1	Deixis	88
4.3.2	Homonyms	90
4.3.3	Other similar texts / discourses	90
4.3.4	Your prior knowledge	91
4.4	Register	92
4.5	Literal language and figurative language	95
4.5.1	Similes	95
4.5.2	Metaphor	96

4.5.3	Simile versus metaphor	98
4.5.4	Explicit and embedded metaphors	99
4.5.5	Types of metaphor	103
4.5.6	Metonymy	109
4.5.7	Synecdoche	110
4.6	Metaphor and language change	111
4.6.1	New ideas or areas of knowledge	111
4.6.2	Abstract ideas made concrete	112
4.7	Functions of figurative language use	112
4.8	Analysis of meaning: checklist	113
	Suggestions for further reading	114
5	Stylistic applications to drama	115
5.1	Introduction	116
5.1.1	The significance of context	117
5.1.2	Drama on film	117
5.2	How should we analyse drama?	118
5.2.1	Drama as poetry	119
5.2.2	Drama as fiction	119
5.2.3	Drama as conversation	121
5.3	Differences between speech and writing	121
5.3.1	Pauses and pause fillers	123
5.3.2	Unclear speech	123
5.3.3	Repetition and recycling	124
5.3.4	Turn-taking	125
5.3.5	Back channel support	126
5.3.6	Discourse markers	127
5.3.7	Discourse cohesion	127
5.4	Analysing dramatic language	130
5.4.1	Turn quantity and length	130
5.4.2	Exchange sequences	130
5.4.3	Production errors	132
5.4.4	The cooperative principle	133
5.4.5	Speech acts	135
5.4.6	Presuppositions	136
5.4.7	Status marked through language	137
5.4.8	Register	139
5.4.9	Speech and silence – female characters in plays	141
5.5	Analysis of dramatic texts: checklist	142
	Suggestions for further reading	143

6	From classic realism to modernism and postmodernism	145
6.1	Introduction	146
6.2	Literary perspectives on realist texts	147
6.3	The emergence of realism	152
6.4	Stylistic characteristics of realist texts	153
6.4.1	The omniscient narrator	154
6.4.2	Representation of place	157
6.4.3	Representation of dialogue	158
6.4.4	Representation of time	161
6.4.5	Realism in other fictional genres	163
6.5	After classic realism	165
6.6	The origins of modernism	169
6.7	Stylistic characteristics of modernist texts	169
6.7.1	Language as a substance in its own right	170
6.7.2	Departure from conventional literary structures	170
6.7.3	Collage and allusion	171
6.7.4	Register	172
6.8	The origins of postmodernism	172
6.9	Stylistic characteristics of postmodernist texts	174
6.9.1	Language as a free-floating entity	174
6.9.2	Loss of narrative closure	175
6.9.3	Parody and pastiche	176
6.9.4	The end of cultural hierarchy	177
6.9.5	'All stories have been told before'	177
6.9.6	Self-referentiality	178
6.9.7	Irony and humour	179
6.10	The function of style in fiction	180
6.11	Analysis of fiction: checklist	183
	Suggestions for further reading	184
7	Style in popular texts	185
7.1	Introduction	186
7.2	Exploiting patterns in sound and meaning: headline texts	187
7.3	Lexical creativity	189
7.4	Targeting the reader	190
7.4.1	Direct address in media texts	191
7.4.2	Addressing the listener	194

7.4.3	Presupposition in advertising	194
7.5	Reference and deixis	197
7.5.1	Deixis in advertising	199
7.5.2	Deixis in spoken media discourse	200
7.6	Transferring meaning: metaphors in advertising	201
7.7	Analysis of popular texts: checklist	204
	Suggestions for further reading	206
8	Theory and style: next steps	207
8.1	Overview	208
8.2	Linguistics and literary criticism	209
8.3	Texts and the reader	211
8.4	Text as discourse	212
8.5	Critical text analysis	213
8.6	Theory and practice: some further questions	215
8.7	Conclusions	216
	Suggested answers to activities	217
	Glossary	237
	References	249
	Bibliography	255
	Index	261