

CONTENTS

	Page
Preface	iv
Introduction	1
I. What is Ethnography.	7
Areas of Interest	9
Methods	11
Techniques.	13
II. The Rise of National Consciousness	20
Descriptive Human Geography:
Mátyás Bél (1684-1749).	28
Rational Agriculture.	31
Age of the Irrational	39
Romanticism and the 'Age of Language' in Hungary.	43
III. The Rise of Hungarology.	50
The Concept of Hungary as 'Little Europe'	58
Toward a Formulation of National Character	66
Further Clarification of the Magyar Character.	75
IV. The Advent of National Ethnography (1848-1896)	90
Standing Soldiers, Sitting Bureau- crats, Kneeling Priests, and Creeping Secret Police	90
Gods, Fairies, and Other Spirits.	96
Siberia's Message for Linguists	107
Ethnology or Ethnography?	113
V. The Golden Age of Hungarian Eth- nography (1889-1919).	132
The Hungarian Ethnographic Society (HES).	135

Ottó Herman and the 'Ancient Occupations'	154
Fishing in Friendly Waters: János Jankó	161
Fieldwork in Jankó's Time.	171
Peasant Art and Material Ethnography	176
Non-Material Culture Research Around the Turn of the Nineteenth Century.	187
Linguistic Folklore.	187
A Message from the North	191
Ethnography and Physical Anthropology.	202
VI. Selective Expansion in Hungarian Ethnography.	225
Psychoanalysis and Ethnography: Géza Róheim (1891-1953)	230
Storytelling Without an Audience: Gyula Ortutay (1910-)	245
Sociography and Journalistic Ethnography.	248
Sociography.	248
Journalistic Ethnography
Legal Ethnography.	268
The Non-Theorists.	279
The Anatomy of Tools: Object Ethnography	288
Institutionalized Hungarology.	293
VII. The Present	305
Realignment.	306
Escape to Safe Topics.	316
Agro-Historical Ethnography.	323
Culture-Historical Ethnography	325
Epilogue.	337
Bibliography.	344
Index	421