

Contents

Notes on Contributors	ix
Acknowledgements	xii
1 Introduction Philip Shaw and Vincent Newey	1
2 Romantic Self-Representation: The Example of Mary Wollstonecraft's Letters in Sweden Peter Swaab	13
3 The Shock of the Old: Wordsworth and the Paths to Rome Keith Hanley	31
4 Autobiography as Self-Indulgence: De Quincey and His Reviewers Julian North	61
5 The Romance of Sickliness: Leigh Hunt's Autobiography and the Example of Keats Nicholas Roe	71
6 Why Do We Remember Forwards and Not Backwards? Philip Davis	81
7 Autobiography and the Illative Sense William Myers	103
8 Displacing the Autobiographical Impulse: A Bakhtinian Reading of Thomas Carlyle's Reminiscences David Amigoni	120
9 Victorian Women as Writers and Readers of (Auto)biography Joanne Shattock	140
10 'Fathers' Daughters': Three Victorian Anti-Feminist Women Autobiographers Valerie Sanders	153
11 Mark Rutherford's Salvation and the Case of Catharine Furze Vincent Newey	172

12	Seconding the Self: Mary Chesnut's Civil War Rosemarie Morgan	204
13	Autobiography as Prophecy: Walt Whitman's 'Specimen Days' Nicholas Everett	217
14	Buried in Laughter: The Memories and Adventures of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle Diana Barsham	235
	Index	253