

Contents

Acknowledgements page x

PART 1 MAPPING

1 Introduction	3
Poetry's occlusion of the urban	3
Linguistic pastoralism	6
Cities in process	8
Mapping the 'zones' of contemporary poetry	11
Women poets and the city – Denise Riley	16
2 'The roads to hell'	23
Thinking with cities	23
Dissolving the urban?	30
Poetry and the urban dissolve – Paul Farley	36
Moral anxieties and the urban dissolve	39
3 Three urban tropes	45
Urban 'double visioning'	45
'Setting' and 'geography'	48
Chronotopic approaches	52
Coping with chronotopes – Bill Griffiths's The Book of Split Cities	57

4 Writing the inner city	61
Ken Edwards, 'Drumming'	62
Barry MacSweeney, Hellhound Memos	67
John Barnie, The City	77
Peter Reading, Perduta Gente	83
Ken Smith, Fox Running and 'The London Poems'	88

PART 2 LOCAL SPECIFICS

5 'North of the word' or 'Why, this is Hull'	105
Peter Didsbury	107
Sean O'Brien	117
Douglas Houston	125

6 'The hard lyric': re-registering Liverpool poetry	137
Roger McGough	139
Brian Patten	142
Adrian Henri	143
Levi Tafari	146
Matt Simpson	150
Deryn Rees-Jones	155
Robert Hampson	159

7 'Take off your shoes in King's Cross': envisioning London	165
Topographical epics	165
The muck-rake: Iain Sinclair's Lud Heat	169
Lud Heat and Sinclair's later work	175
The topological shovel: Allen Fisher's Place	179
The sky scrape: Aidan Dun's Vale Royal	186

8 'Birmingham's what I think with': Roy Fisher's cities	193
Roy Fisher and the fulcrum between 'mainstream' and 'margins'	193
Fisher's composite urban epic	196
Reading 'Six Texts'	202

9 'I remember when all these fields were factories': writing the vanishing city	223
Ciaran Carson, Belfast Confetti	226
Edwin Morgan, 'Glasgow Sonnets'	232
W. N. Herbert	240
Select bibliography	243
Index	247