

Family and Relationships
in Ian McEwan's Fiction

Between Fantasy and Desire

Tomasz Dobrogoszcz

LEXINGTON BOOKS

Lanham • Boulder • New York • London

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	1
I: Beginnings	11
1 Disturbing Proximity and Grotesque Proportions When It Comes to First Love , Last Rites and In Between the Sheets	13
2 The Oedipal Siblings in The Cement Garden of Eden	31
3 Anchoring The Comfort Of Strangers in the Sadistic Paternal Superego	43
II: Developments	59
4 The Child in Time and the Child Within	61
5 The Precariousness of The Innocent Childish Masculinity	77
6 The Traumatic Encounter with Black Dogs and the Real	87
7 Enduring Love , Childlessness, Unreliability, and the Enigma of the Other's Desire	101
III: Maturity	119
8 The Path toward Death via Amsterdam	121
9 The Recognition of Otherness in the Fantasy of Atonement	133
10 The Pacifying Saturday Fantasy of a Non-pacifist	155
11 The Big Other Is Watching You Even On Chesil Beach	171

IV: Recent Fiction	181
12 Solar and the Unbearable Heaviness of Desire	183
13 The Opalescent Sweet Tooth of Deceptive Manipulation	195
14 How The Children Act to Effect the Split between Psychological and Symbolic Identity	207
15 Craving the Mother's Desire in a Nutshell	219
Conclusion: Love Will Tear Us Apart?	231
Permissions Credits	237
Bibliography	241
Index	251
About the Author	255